By James E. Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Sept. 11.—German war planes have bombed Buckingham Palace, residence of King George and Queen Elizabeth, but no member of the Royal entourage was injured, it was officially disclosed today.

Severe damage was done by a delayed action bomb which went off with a terrific detonation yesterday. It dropped out of the skies during one of the devastating Nazi raids of the week-end.
The missile fell near the wing of the Royal Palace where visiting Royalty from foreign lands have been accommodated as guests for more than a century. The initial damage when the bomb first fell was small, but the ex-

LEGION PLANS FOR GALA CONVENTION

Record Number of Delegates Are Expected To Attend
National Gathering

TO BE HELD IN BOSTON

By Eugene J. Cadon
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 11.— (INS)—With the largest membership in history and eight active candidates for national commander, the American Legion probably will hold one of its most interesting national conventions at Boston, Sept. 23-26, leaders of the veterans' organization said today.

The membership, on which delegates representation is based, is 1,067,175, which exceeds by 41,628 the strength a year ago.

The eight candidates are Paul G.
Armstrong, Chicago printing company official; Raymond Fields, publisher of Guthrie, Okla.; Roane Waring, president and general counsel of the Memphis Street Railway Company; Edward N. Scheiberling, of Albany, N. Y., a judge; and Warren G. Atherton, of Stockton, Calif.; Jack Crowley, of Rutland, Vt.; Lynn V. Stambaugh, of Fargo, N. D.; and Milo J. Warner, of Toledo, O., all lawyers.

Four were aspirants last year when Raymond J. Kelly, of Detroit, was the winner. They are Fields, Scheiberling, Stambaugh and Warner.

Of the 22 commanders that have served the Legion, 13 have been attorneys or former lawyers, two bankers, two insurance men, two real estate men, two in other business and one a rancher.

Former Legion national heads have achieved much distinction in the political world. Paul V. McNutt is former Governor of Indiana and now is Federal Security Administrator. Louis Johnson is former Assistant Secretary of War. Hanford MacNider once held that post and later was United States Minister to Canada. Alvin Owsley has served as American minister to Ireland, Romania and Denmark.

The Legion national commander has headquarters in Indianapolis. He serves one year and may not succeed himself. He receives $10,000 a year and travels about 100,000 miles in that period, sometimes making as many as 1,000 speeches. There will be at least 1,447 delegates to the Boston convention, the highest number in history.

The record-breaking national gathering in New York in 1937 mustered 1,341 delegates and the 1939 gathering in Chicago, 1,405.

The total this year may be swelled by representations of 17 posts outside the continental limits of the United States. Six such posts had delegates last year, but the European war may reduce this number at Boston.

The total number of delegates for each of the 58 Legion departments is based on one delegate for each 1,000 members, or major fraction thereof, five delegates at large, and members of the national executive committee, which includes all living past national commanders, five current national vice commanders and the national chaplain.

The Department of New York, with a record membership of 95,181, will have a delegation of 102, the largest block of delegates from any state. Illinois will be next with 99; Pennsylvania third with 82; California fourth with 76; Ohio fifth with 56; Massachusetts sixth with 53; Indiana, Iowa and Michigan each will have 45, and Wisconsin, 42.

Men, Women and Children Trapped in Refuge Shelter

London, Sept. 11.—In the worst single tragedy of German air raids on London thus far, almost 500 men, women and children were trapped and feared dead today in the wreckage of an East End school which had been converted into a refuge shelter.

A brief new air raid warning this afternoon failed to deter rescue workers from their frantic efforts to reach possible survivors buried beneath the tangled ruins of the two-story structure, although hope was virtually abandoned that any more would be found alive.

Of the first 90 removed from the shattered debris only one person was alive. Soon after, however, rescuers reached two infants—one six months old and one nine months—and by a seemingly miracle both were breathing.

The victims took shelter in the school building on Monday night after being evacuated from another East End district which had been badly hit.
One gigantic aerial torpedo struck the school squarely, smashing it to rubble. Masonry and steel girders crumpled down upon the refugees.

The force of the explosion transformed streets in the vicinity into a mass of wreckage.

Announce New Highway Program

Harrisburg, Sept. 11.—A supplementary rural road program involving the construction or re-construction of 195.12 miles of so-called "Pinchot roads" at an estimated cost of $3,253,- 000 today was announced by Secretary of Highways Hughes.

The huge program, spread over 54 counties and composed of 91 projects in rural Pennsylvania areas, was suggested last week by Governor James.
At that time he declared the work could be accomplished with present highway forces.

Projects will be launched immediately, according to Hughes, who explained that the program will be financed by unexpended balances of funds allocated to sponsor WPA projects.

Projects on the supplemental rural road program include: Bucks County—Route 09060, between Carversville and Wismer, 3.51 miles of new construction, and Route 09077, from U. S. Route 611 to Route 413, 1.73 miles of new construction.

2-year-old trot, 2-year-old pace and the 2:24 pace this afternoon. Some 60 head of the finest harness racing stock in this section of the country will compete this week. Among the headliners are Time's Scarce, Prosperi-pine, Symbol Roy and many others.

Veteran horsemen say that the track record at Doylestown is due for a beating this week. The trotting record in a race is 2:05½, held by Peter F. J., made six years ago during fair week.
That same week the pacing record of stown Fair, the scheduled meeting of the Bucks County Council of Republican Women that was to have been held at the Doylestown Country Club tomorrow, has been postponed until a later the place of this week's postponed meeting.

District Commander Paul R. Sine, Perkasie, installed the recently elected officers of the Edgar H. Denson Post, No. 79, A. L., at a meeting held in the River House, New Hope. The event, attended by about 55 members and guests, was featured by the serving of a delicious turkey dinner. On the table was a large cake decorated with the national colors and the emblem of the Legion, and the room was decorated with the Legion colors.

Included among the guests of honor was William Denson, aged 82, father of Edgar H. Denson, who was killed in action in France and for whom the post was named. Other guests, in addition to District Commander Sine and Mr. Denson, were District Deputy Commander George H. Pielman, Perkasie;

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Effect of The Deal
Washington, Sept. 10.

THE political strategists of the White House are greatly pleased at the way in which Mr. Roosevelt "got away" with his "destroyer deal."

It is their conviction that the popularity of helping the British has more than offset any damage done by the ruthless sweeping aside of the Constitution and dictatorial assumption of power which marked the method.

IF the reaction to that had been bad, it easily might have put a very big dent in the third-term campaign. But, apparently, the people as a whole either did not grasp the unprecedented nature of the step or are too used to the charge of assumption of power to be deeply impressed. In any event, while a great many men who favored the transfer of the destroyers are disturbed over what seems an utterly indefensible procedure, from the political standpoint it probably has done Mr. Roosevelt good rather than harm. At least that is the theory. It strengthens the picture of him as a bold leader who fearlessly cut red tape to take a greatly needed action which could not be delayed. It is not an accurate picture, but it is politically useful. Those who know the facts know that Mr. Roosevelt delayed action on this matter for more than six weeks, that tremendous pressure was put on him to act; that he had to be assured of support from various individuals hostile to him as a candidate and promised that he would not be criticized by others.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN HEAR OF CONVENTION

Miss Eleanor Worthington Relates Experiences As An Alternate Delegate

GIVES A PLEASING TALK

Experiences at the Republican National Convention were recounted by Miss Eleanor Worthington, Hartsville, former clerk of the Orphans Court of Bucks County, when she appeared before members of Lower Bucks County Council of Republican Women, last evening, in the Travel Club home.

Miss Worthington, who was introduced by Mrs. Harry Frederick, Croydon, council president, served as alternate delegate from this district to the national convention in Philadelphia.
That the Republican National convention impressed all rather as an American convention, was one of the points stressed by the one who has been so active in affairs of Bucks County over a period of years.

Tremendously enthused with all phases of convention activity, and happy to have been selected for the honor, Miss Worthington gave to the gathering a comprehensive view of the Convention Hall in Philadelphia as it appeared last June, prefacing her remarks by telling of the caucus called in that city for Pennsylvania delegates during May.

The instructions given in the resolution drawn up, she informed, were for the Pennsylvania delegates to support Governor Arthur James "as long as feasible." She told of the stirring patriotic address of Senator George Wharton Pepper at the start of the convention, delivered in the court-yard of Independence Hall. The thrill which came at the sound of the tapping of the Liberty Bell 13 times, and the patriotic selections by opera stars, were included in the interesting discourse.

Before launching into an account of the procedure of the convention, Miss Worthington described the attractive decorations of the huge hall, the bronze eagles about the galleries standing out, and giving the air of a truly "American" convention; the few elephants being on the standards of the delegates.

The arrangement of the speakers' stand, the broadcasting room, Governor Stassen, the keynote; the 35-minute demonstration for Governor James; the microphones at the end of each row of delegates which were connected at will with the amplifiers—all were vividly described.

The Bucks Countian was pleased with the opportunity given alternates from this state to vote for the vice presidential candidate.

One of the thrilling moments, she told, was that when Wendell Willkie, nominee for the presidency, appeared with Mrs. Willkie. "Mr. Willkie greatly impressed me—both with his simplicity and his sincerity," she added.

During the business session, which preceded Miss Worthington's interesting talk, Mrs. Walter Cooper read the minutes of the last session; Mrs. Horace N. Davis reported on the condition of the treasury; and Mrs. Leo Lynn, Edgely, membership chairman, also reported on activities.

night to steal ten cents from the gas

Efforts to gain an entrance through a side window failed and then another window was broken and part of a plaster board wall was cut so that an entrance could be obtained into the main office. Two nickels were taken from a box.

GRANDMOTHER IN COURT PLEADS FOR 1 OF 3 GRANDSONS

Mrs. Jennie Smith, Croydon, Blames Children's Plight
On Their Father

"TAUGHT TO STEAL"

Two of The Three Are Committed To Huntingdon Reformatory

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 11.—Declaring that their father was a bad, wicked man and taught them how to steal, a quietly-spoken, grey-haired grandmother, Mrs. Jennie Smith, of Croydon, in a session of court on Monday afternoon before President Judge Hiram H.
Keller, made a plea in behalf of one grandson but asked for no mercy for two more grandsons who were committed to the Huntingdon Reformatory for an indefinite time.

Three brothers, Charles Allen Michael McGowan, 18, of Croydon, who came out of a C.C.C. camp in March; John C. McGowan, 22, of Philadelphia, and Edward J. McGowan, 21, also of Phila., pleaded guilty to larceny and receiving stolen goods before Judge Keller.

Two of the red-haired brothers, Charles and Edward, each of whom have had reformatory sentences before in their young lives, were sent to Huntingdon again by Judge Keller "because the taxpayers might just as well pay for their keep there, and be protected, as pay for them through relief or the W. P. A."

John, who left his grandmother's home in Croydon and lived with his father in Philadelphia, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for a period of three years.

John, who has never been in any previous trouble, recently came out of the United States Army. "I know John is a good boy because he lived with me and helped me out," said his grandmother.

The grandmother, who was definitely moved about the tragedy of the whole case, restrained herself admirably.
"You remember," she said, turning to Judge Keller, "how I begged you in 1935 to send Edward to Glen Mills in this very court because he needed discipline and medical attention."

Judge Keller nodded assent. "I remember you told the Court then how the boys' mother was dead and how they were influenced by their father."

"The boys never had a chance; they had a bad, wicked father who taught them to steal and drove them out to steal, beating them up if they came back without anything," said Mrs.
Smith.

GOOD IDEA IF IT WORKS

A pilotless plane, capable of observing or bombing an enemy's emplacements, is the latest novelty to be pulled out of the Pandora's box of war.

At Dayton, Ohio, Army engineers are reported by Dr. Lee DeForest to be building an experimental craft which may be loaded with a television camera, by way of which impulses may be conveyed to a receiver in the controlling plane, or with explosives, in which case it would act as an aerial torpedo. As the robot would be an unarmored creation of plastics and cheaply built—$500 is the figure mentioned—it would be unnecessary to figure on bringing it back. Its potential speed is reckoned at 425 miles an hour.

The layman is ready to believe that little is beyond the ingenuity of science bent on destruction. But he recalls having heard it said that any craft which may be directed by radio is susceptible to radio interference. Perhaps the Dayton experimenters have overcome what would seem at first blush to be a mild defect.

Certainly there are few embarrassments which would exceed that of sending forth a ton of high explosive in a robot plane, with a view to dropping it on the unspeakable enemy, and having the enemy cut in with a device which would send it back whence it came.

Marlborough, in his day, and others would load their cannon with balls fired at them by the foe, but a boomerang plane well stocked with TNT somehow doesn't sound safe. Still, the boys at Dayton may have considered this, too.

MECHANIZATION

The war has reached that stage where some of the military experts are beginning to doubt the efficacy of the element of preponderant numbers in armed forces. Once it was axiomatic that the number of men a general could throw into a battle was the decisive factor. It was this fact which gave infantry its foremost place in fighting history, despite artillery and cavalry additions to the science.

Now those who are studying changes in warfare and trying to fit innovations into the science are inclined to contend that with tanks, planes and anti-aircraft guns, what a general most needs is a crack front force, thoroughly equipped and not necessarily large in numbers. This new view of effectual war comprehends of course the need of armies of men, not at the front, but back in the factories to assure a copious and constant supply of equipment and munitions.

One of the tasks of the future historian will be digging up figures to see how Hitler compared with the bubonic plague of the Fourteenth Century and the influenza epidemic of 1918.

Next to setting a new weather mark of any kind, making history is the most painful thing.

"CUPID RIDES A BUS" by POLAN BANKS

CHAPTER I

GINGER DRAKE was black-listed.

Twenty, and talented, she was exceedingly lovely; fluted melody honeyed her throat, and staccatoed rhythm dwelt in her tiny feet. Yet she was definitely unwanted.

"You could be Grace Moore and Eleanor Powell and Greta Garbo thrown into one—and even Gypsy Rose Lee," said Mr. Benjamin O'Riley, gloom written on both his stomachs and all four chins of him. "But Ronny Rockaby has passed around the word not to give you a job even as a hat-check girl. That's the real low-down."

"Ronny Rockaby is a crooner and a cad!" Disillusionment was in Ginger, and indignation. "Just because I won't marry him—he's going to smash my career, is he?"

"Going to ain't the word for it," observed the O'Riley. "The word is 'did.'"

Her almond-shaped eyes above the turned-up nose flashed emerald fire. "And you mean to tell me that a— a crooner—can get away with an outrage like that?"

"Ronny Rockaby ain't only a crooner," her agent reminded her, practically. "He's God's gift to women, and Crown Prince of the Air. His fan mail comes in tons and his salary in telephone numbers. But you know that yourself."

"I ought to—he's done nothing but tell me about it, for six months," said Ginger. "So what?"

"Ronny also happens to know where several bodies are buried," he added dryly. "So people like to do him favors. Put it all together, and it spells 'Ginger Drake don't eat!'"

"I can hardly believe it of him," Ginger, who thought she knew men, was annoyed.

"All's fair in love and war," said Mr. O'Riley. "No—Ronny ain't used to being turned down. And he knows you're ambitious."

Ginger seethed. "I wouldn't speak to him again if he could put my name in all the electric lights on Broadway!"

Mr. O'Riley thought sadly of his vanished commissions.

"Look here—you're not in love with some out-of-work ham or piccolo-player, are you?"

"In love?" Ginger's voice dripped gall. "I hate men. Loathe them. Despise, detest, and abominate them!" And added vindictively:

"Tropical fish have the right idea—the females, I mean, that eat their mates. If Ronny were only a fish—"

She broke off. "Surely, Mr. O'Riley, you're not going to let an entertainer interfere with my future—"

"I just told you, your future is past—unless you make up with Ronny."

Her indignation mounted.

"And you'd let a girl starve, just because you're afraid of the influence of an egotistic, conceited—"

"I've got other clients to think of," he defended himself. "You've got what it takes, Ginger—and you know I'd help you if I could. But what can I do?"

"I've got to get a job," she told him earnestly. "Not only because I need the money—but because I've got to succeed, now, more than ever. I've got to!" She gave him an appealing look. "If New York's out—" send me somewhere else. But send me somewhere!"

"Out of town?" He looked surprised, then pursed his lips, and blinked. "Say—could you go to Miami?"

"Miami?" Ginger was startled. "Florida?"

"Yeah, Miami." The agent picked up a telegram from his cluttered desk, and glanced at it, as if for confirmation. "There's a spot open for a girl like you at the Club Caribbean. Not much salary, but it's a good break—most of the Broadway and Hollywood crowd will be down sometime during the Winter, and catch your act. If you give 'em all Club Caribbean—Miami, Monday by noon. Correct?"

"That's right," he nodded. "I'll send him a wire you're on your way Good luck, Ginger."

Ginger left the office walking or air, her facile imagination working on all eight cylinders.

Florida. Sunbaths on the beach. Afternoons at the races. Palms and swimming-pools—millionaires and movie magnates. A spot at a smart club, that was to be the stepping-stone to fame and fortune. . . . Perhaps her knight might come riding across Biscayne Bay on a white yacht. Ginger was incurably romantic, despite the Ronny Rockabys.

"Ronny Rockaby has passed around word not to give you a job even as hat-check girl!"

you've got, I wouldn't be surprised to see you back here with a real contract next year."

"It sounds marvelous," Ginger brightened. "When can I go?"

"It ain't when can you go—it's when you got to go," he told her. "The job's open only until Monday noon. If you're not there to take it by then, they're signing an act from Havana. Max Baxter's a funny temperamental guy—thinks he's another Ziegfeld or Napoleon, or somebody. If you're five minutes late—he'd be just as apt to turn you down, even if you came all the way from the North Pole."

"Don't worry—I'll be there if I have to walk!"

"I don't care how you get there, as long as you do," said O'Riley. And added hastily: "You'll have to raise your own fare, though. Collections haven't been so good with me this week."

"I'll manage it, thanks," she smiled. And rose. "Max Baxter—"

It did not occur to her until she was out on the sidewalk of Forty-second Street that Miami was a long way off, and it cost money to get there. Ginger opened her purse and counted her worldly wealth. Her capital, she found, totaled exactly three dollars and forty-seven cents.

There was a tourist ticket office nearby. Also a pawnshop. In twenty minutes she had visited them both, and was back out upon the sidewalk, her bright dreams deflated like a pricked balloon.

It did take money to go to Miami—by plane, rail, boat, or bus. More money than she could beg, borrow, or steal. The only two men from whom she might have borrowed were Ronny Rockaby and Mr. O'Riley. The latter had made it plain, as agents will, that she could not count on him. And Ronny, under the circumstances, was out of the question.

"Aggie" Robinson or Bernie Coyle Likely To Pitch
For The Girls

Having made such a fine showing in their first meeting, the Robinson Bloomer Girls softball team, of Morrisville, has been re-matched with the Rohm & Haas ten. The game will be played on the Maple Beach diamond this evening at 6:15 o'clock.

It is most likely that Manager Howard Smoyer will again send his ace underhand twirler, Anthony Castor, against the girls who, in the last meeting of the clubs, made eight hits off his delivery. His help-mate behind the plate will be Charlie Simpson.

For the females, it is most likely that either "Aggie" Robinson or Bernie Coyle will do the throwing with "Jackie" Mitchell behind the plate. The rest of the girls' line-up will be composed of Parcinski, Link, Snelson, Roberts, Rottkamp, Walterjek.

Captain Herman Schmidt, who did such a fine job at the hot corner position in the last game will again be at the post and will be flanked at his left by Johnny Dick. The remainder of the mechanical department's lineup will consist of Miller, Hamm, Appleton, Andy, Knowles, and Lear.

KING AND DIAMOND TO MEET IN FINAL GAME

The final game between King Supply and Diamond to determine which team will meet Croydon Y. M. A. in the final playoff round of the Bristol Suburban Baseball League will be played at Landreth Field Saturday, starting at 1:30 p. m.

King and Diamond split a double header last Sunday, necessitating the third game. Croydon gained the final round by taking two games from Edgely last Saturday.

The first game of the final series to determine the winner of the play-off trophy will be played as the second half of a double-header at Landreth Saturday. The final two games between the winner of the King-Diamond tilt and Croydon will be played as a double feature on Sunday at Rohm & Haas field. If one team should capture two straight, the third game will not be necessary.

plosion many hours later sheared off the entire front of the old palace conservatory which was converted into a swimming pool some time ago.

The King and Queen, as well as Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose, were at Windsor Castle for the week-end when the bomb fell. His Majesty, returning to London to tour wrecked areas, risked his life by visiting the spot where the bomb fell, but he was not near when the explosion occurred.

The blast blew out every window on one entire side of the huge palace, heavily pitting the walls and causing some damage to interior furnishings.

A crater 30 yards across was filled with huge chunks of masonry and round sections of wrecked stone pillars were hurled to the earth. For many yards around the grounds were littered with debris, glass and splinters of wood and stone.

The entire front of the conservatory had been cut off as by a giant cleaver and the swimming pool itself was cracked and empty.

ing men and women who are essentially following the realistic ideals of Christ Jesus in every phase of their life."

Miss Jane Rogers presented side-light thoughts on the influence of the radio in the home, recalling the worthwhile program where great sermons, great lectures, and worldwide news of the day influence the thinking of the members of millions of homes in America.

Mrs. Du Hamel gave a resume of some inspiring thoughts heard recently at Ocean Grove, N. J. E. Stanley Jones, in speaking of world conditions, said "There is always a Third Day in every crisis of our lives. 'On the Third Day, Jesus, when triumphant over death,' arose on the first Easter morning. In the chaotic condition of Europe, the second day has arrived, but there will be a 'Third Day' when God will triumph, bringing in His peace to the heavy laden and the downcast."

Group singing was enjoyed, and the solos of Miss Laura Ellis added much to the program. After the serving of refreshments by the hostess the meeting was adjourned to convene October 8th, at the home of Mrs. Duhamel.

barn to capacity. This morning, as newspapermen made a trip through the barn, the cows were being treated to music from a well known dance orchestra via radio and they liked it.

Maryland's first national champion, "L'Alva Snowdrop," a Jersey, is being exhibited together with a grand lot of other Jerseys from the Ayrlan Farms, at Bethesda, Md.

Near the cattle barn will be found the entire building bearing the colors of the well known Rush Valley Farms of James Work, New York airplane manufacturer, who is exhibiting 11 head of Percheron horses, including champions galore, pointing toward the International Show in Chicago. This building is probably the most attractively decorated on the fair grounds and its contents, the most valuable.

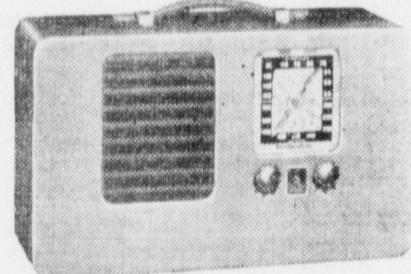

A healthy grunt or two leads one to the hog building where the best that Bucks county produces is being exhibited by the Bucks County 4-H Swine Club and others. The boys and girls of the county have really contributed the large majority of enthusiasm so far as exhibits are concerned. They have actually taken the place of their elders, the veterans of the soil, who are conspicuous by their small numbers this year.
